

New York Enacts Gender Equity Laws

By Susan M. Corcoran, Richard I. Greenberg and Michelle E. Phillips

October 23, 2015

New York State Governor Andrew Cuomo has signed into law a number of bills intended to protect and advance women's equality, particularly in the workplace. These laws, signed on October 21, will go into effect on January 19, 2016.

Wages

In line with recent legislation enacted in other jurisdictions (see, e.g., our article, District of Columbia Passes Legislation Allowing Employees to Discuss Wages), and effectively closing a loophole in the current state law permitting employers to prohibit salary-related discussions, an amendment to New York Labor Law Sec. 194 allows employees to discuss wages freely. Employees covered by the National Labor Relations Act already have the right to engage in such discussions.

Further, New York Labor Law Sec. 194 (1) will prohibit an employee from being paid a lower wage than another employee of the opposite sex working in the same establishment, when they perform equal work in a job that requires equal skill, effort, and responsibility, and that is performed under similar working conditions. Exceptions to this mandate are permitted where payment is pursuant to a differential based on seniority and merit systems, systems in which an employee's earnings are measured by quality or quantity of production, and bona-fide factors such as education, training, and experience that are job-related and consistent with business necessity.

Sexual Harassment

An amendment to the definition of "employer" in Sec. 292 (5) of New York's Executive Law expands sexual harassment protection to employees of employers with fewer than four employees. This change, therefore, permits employees of a New York employer of any size to file workplace sexual harassment complaints with the New York State Division of Human Rights and bring an action in court. The Law's four-employee coverage threshold is retained for other kinds of alleged discrimination.

Discrimination Cases

Under an amendment to Sec. 297 (10) of New York's Executive Law, which did not allow recovery of attorneys' fees at trial or an administrative hearing for employment discrimination cases, successful litigants can recover attorneys' fees in cases involving employment or credit discrimination on the basis of sex.

Familial Status

An amendment to Sec. 296 (1) and (1a) of New York's Executive Law extends protection against familial status discrimination to the workplace. Currently, such protection exists only in housing and credit cases under New York law.

With limited exceptions, the law prohibits employers, licensing agencies, employment agencies, and labor organizations from:

- discriminating on the basis of familial status,
- printing or circulating any material that directly or indirectly expresses a limitation, specification, or discrimination on the basis of familial status, or
- inquiring on an application or otherwise making an inquiry in the context of prospective employment so as to directly or indirectly express a limitation, specification, or discrimination on the basis of familial status.

Pregnancy

The final piece of legislation, amending Sec. 292 (21e) of New York's Executive Law, which is similar to current New York City law, expands protection for pregnant workers under state law. State law will require employers to provide reasonable accommodations for employees with pregnancy-related conditions, unless the proposed accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the employer's business.

Next

What's on the horizon? Given the absence of legislation in certain areas related to gender equality and

Meet the Authors

Susan M. Corcoran

Principal
New York Metro
White Plains 914-872-6871
Email

Richard I. Greenberg

Principal
New York Metro
New York City 212-545-4080
Email

Michelle E. Phillips

Principal
New York Metro
White Plains 914-872-6899
Email

Practices

Disability, Leave and Health
Management
Litigation
Wage and Hour

gender identity, we anticipate Governor Cuomo will direct the State Division of Human Rights to issue regulations extending protections against discrimination based on gender identity, gender expression, transgender status, and gender dysphoria. Governor Cuomo reportedly announced on October 22 that he will seek to prohibit harassment and discrimination on the basis of transgender identity, gender expression, and gender dysphoria in the areas of public and private housing, employment, credit, education, and public accommodations. The regulations are likely to be published in the state registry soon, and will be subject to a 45-day comment period before taking effect.

Employers should familiarize themselves with their new obligations and consult with employment counsel to determine whether and how their particular organizations are affected by the new laws. At a minimum, employers are strongly encouraged to review their Harassment and Equal Employment Opportunity Policies for compliance with these new laws.

©2015 Jackson Lewis P.C. This material is provided for informational purposes only. It is not intended to constitute legal advice nor does it create a client-lawyer relationship between Jackson Lewis and any recipient. Recipients should consult with counsel before taking any actions based on the information contained within this material. This material may be considered attorney advertising in some jurisdictions. Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome.

Focused on labor and employment law since 1958, Jackson Lewis P.C.'s 950+ attorneys located in major cities nationwide consistently identify and respond to new ways workplace law intersects business. We help employers develop proactive strategies, strong policies and business-oriented solutions to cultivate high-functioning workforces that are engaged, stable and diverse, and share our clients' goals to emphasize inclusivity and respect for the contribution of every employee. For more information, visit <https://www.jacksonlewis.com>.

---

©2022 Jackson Lewis P.C. All rights reserved. Attorney Advertising. Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome. No client-lawyer relationship has been established by the posting or viewing of information on this website.

*The National Operations Center serves as the firm's central administration hub and houses the firm's Facilities, Finance, Human Resources and Technology departments.