Allegations of sexual harassment against prominent media and entertainment industry moguls may have broken the dam holding back women from reporting their experiences. How will your company respond today? Whether currently faced with harassment allegations and the surrounding publicity, potentially susceptible to it, or just trying to implement preventative policies and practices, it is critical to create a positive culture for the future. It also may be the difference between your business' survival or demise.

This webinar will equip you to prevent such conduct at your company, to properly respond internally to such allegations, and equally important to respond externally to avoid having the press tell your story for you. You only get one chance to defend your reputation. Make it good.
