Regardless of industry, size, or geographic location, the volume of whistleblower and retaliation claims employers face continues to expand dramatically. Recent trends suggest employers need to be prepared for a rise in claims originating out of compliance, legal and quality operations, as well as the myriad of safety-related retaliation claims being made by employees returning to the workplace. Moreover, the new Administration is likely to take steps to further expand whistleblower protections and remedies.

During this session, Lee Lastovich and Jessica Marsh will discuss what to expect and how to manage the next wave of whistleblower and retaliation claims.
