

Vaccine Mandate Litigation

As COVID-19 vaccines became available, many states, municipalities and companies made decisions on the best way to protect people from COVID-19, including the implementation of vaccine mandates.

Overview

Since the onset of the pandemic, Jackson Lewis has been guiding employers through the legal thicket, working side by side with clients across the country to assist them in responding to COVID-19 workplace challenges. Our Vaccine Litigation Task Force, comprised of attorneys with subject matter knowledge and vaccine litigation experience, has helped employers respond to this latest legal phase of the pandemic. In addition to counseling employers as they navigate sensitive and complex issues in order to protect their employees and their businesses, we are successfully defending employer vaccination requirements in court, as well as measures taken to enforce those requirements.
