Karuna represents employers in a broad range of workplace matters, including litigation, arbitration, preventative advice and counseling, and investigations. Her practice focuses on litigating disputes in federal and state court, arbitration, and administrative proceedings before the National Labor Relations Board and Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Karuna is enthusiastic about leveraging her experience to prevent legal exposure in the first place by partnering with clients on issues such as disability and leave management, employee discipline and termination, wage and hour compliance, and worker classification. Having worked with government contractors and employers in the oil and gas, energy, construction, manufacturing, and distribution industries, Karuna recognizes the nuances of addressing workplace concerns on a national scale, in the union and non-union context.
