New Jersey's Post-COVID-19 'Road Back' Plan Full of Red Lights

By James M. McDonnell & Justin B. Cutlip

April 28, 2020

Meet the Authors

James M. McDonnell Principal 908-795-5208 James.McDonnell@jacksonlewis.com

Justin B. Cutlip Of Counsel 908-795-5136 Justin.Cutlip@jacksonlewis.com

Related Services

COVID-19 Workplace Safety and Health New Jersey Governor Phil Murphy has released The Road Back: Restoring Economic Health Through Public Health, outlining six principles or milestones that will guide the state in deciding whether to ease the stay-at-home restrictions implemented on March 21, 2020, in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

(For details of the stay-at-home restrictions, see our article,New Jersey Closes Non- Essential Retail Businesses, Directs Stay-at-Home, Sets State Response to COVID-19.)

The Road Back stresses public health over economic health. It provides no specific target dates or clarity on potential restrictions following any lifting of the state's restrictions on business operations. The decisions must wait until additional data demonstrates sustained improvement in public health.

Six Key Principles

The Governor explained that the following six principles will guide the state in its decisions on lifting existing restrictions:

- 1. Demonstrate sustained reductions in new COVID-19 cases and hospitalizations.
- 2. Expand testing capacity.
- 3. Implement robust contact tracing.
- 4. Secure safe places and resources for isolation and quarantine.
- 5. Execute a responsible economic restart.
- 6. Ensure New Jersey's resiliency.

These principles are fluid and provide the state the flexibility to adjust, as data on the public health crisis will shape New Jersey's steps to reopen businesses.

Principles Regarding Business

While hospitalizations and testing capacity statistics are readily available, the principles include the creation of a "Restart and Recovery Commission" to advise on the reopening process.

The Governor expects to name members to the commission on April 28, 2020. However, The Road Back calls for a plan with a "methodical and strategic return to work based on level of disease transmission risk and essential classification." Furthermore, upon a return to work, social distancing measures "where feasible and appropriate" must continue.

Businesses should not expect a return to normalcy yet. Any restart likely will include an orderly and extended reversal of the current restrictions, with each step in the process requiring support of available health data. While a business can develop contingency plans to reopen, advice from the Restart and Recovery Commission likely will affect those plans. Nevertheless, any contingency plans should include limiting capacity in the place of business (at least initially), social distancing policies, provisions for cleaning and disinfectant protocols, availability of supplies (e.g., masks, gloves, and so on) for workers and visitors, and other items covered by previous Executive Orders, among other precautions.

Jackson Lewis has a dedicated team tracking and responding to the developing issues facing employers as a result of COVID-19. Please contact a team member or the Jackson Lewis attorney with whom you regularly work if you have questions or need assistance.

©2020 Jackson Lewis P.C. This material is provided for informational purposes only. It is not intended to constitute legal advice nor does it create a client-lawyer relationship between Jackson Lewis and any recipient. Recipients should consult with counsel before taking any actions based on the information contained within this material. This material may be considered attorney advertising in some jurisdictions. Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome.

Focused on employment and labor law since 1958, Jackson Lewis P.C.'s 1,000+ attorneys located in major cities nationwide consistently identify and respond to new ways workplace law intersects business. We help employers develop proactive strategies, strong policies and business-oriented solutions to cultivate high-functioning workforces that are engaged and stable, and share our clients' goals to emphasize belonging and respect for the contributions of every employee. For more information, visit https://www.jacksonlewis.com.